Dear Madam:

We have your letter with the old paper money notes , and as we collect these here at this Museum, we are glad to accept your gift. Thank you very much for offering and presenting these to us. I am sure there will be a good number of notes in the bunch that you have, that we do not have here.

Again thanking you,

Yours very truly,

Curator.

Dear Sir

I thought in my afflicted condition
you would offer
me something for the notes I wrote
you about. The U S Treasury sent your name
to me I was proud to write you about
the. I could sell them at Jonesboro for their Centennial this summer
I am a poor helpless
woman have not walked any for near four years ? Thought by having these many. Some one would offer me something to help me a little I am willing to let you have them. if you are willing to help me a little. I enclosed a stamped envelope to send the $2.00 sent you if you dont want them

Dear Madam:

Please pardon our mistake in thinking that you desired to present the specimens of broken bank bills that are in your possession. As you probably know, they are virtually worthless. However, we are willing to give you the approximate price that these bills are bought for at wholesale up here in the north, which is two cents each. If you would care to let us have them at that price, kindly send them along. If you think you can do better in the south, do not hesitate to do so.

Very truly yours,

Curator.

Dear Sir:

Your school currency banknote has no special value. It would simply be worth a few cents as a slight curiosity. They are not rare. You notice it will pay bearer one dollar in school currency, which is of no more value than the note itself.
